George Michell is a distinguished scholar of international repute in art, architecture, and landscape history and a prolific author of more than a dozen seminal books. He has been involved in heritage conservation efforts most notably at Vijayanagara, a World Heritage Site in Karnataka, India. Since 1980, George Michell has co-directed an international team of archaeologists and architects that has been mapping and measuring the ruins of Hampi, the 14th-16th century capital of the Vijayanagara Empire of southern India. His lecture titled “Exploring the City of Victory—Vijayanagara” will present results of over two decades of archaeological fieldwork and scholarship on this truly remarkable site.
